

Our Founder

Lyda Hill is a Dallas entrepreneur, philanthropist, and one of the few women to make the 2013 Philanthropy list of most generous donors and Forbes' 2014 list of top 15 entrepreneurs who give back to the community. Through both the for-profit and not-for-profit entities that comprise Lyda Hill Philanthropies, Miss Hill is committed to funding game-changing advances in science and nature, to empowering nonprofit organizations, and to improving the local communities of greatest importance to her, North Texas and Colorado Springs.

Miss Hill's varied career reflects business savvy, entrepreneurial vigor, and a commitment to balancing profit with purpose. She began her career in 1967 when she founded Hill World Travel; it quickly became the largest travel agency in Dallas and was one of the largest in the country when it was sold in 1982. She subsequently served as president of Seven Falls near Colorado Springs, a series of seven cascading waterfalls that has been called, "The Grandest Mile of Scenery in Colorado." She later developed and constructed the Garden of the Gods Visitor and Nature Center, also in Colorado Springs. Miss Hill continued her business pursuits in 1990, by partnering to revitalize the Fort Worth Stockyards into an award-winning, historic tourist and shopping area highlighting the city's heritage.

Believing that 'science is the answer,' Miss Hill also followed her lifelong passion for game-changing life sciences investments – a deeply personal mission heightened by her own battle with breast cancer. Among her many initiatives, she founded the Oklahoma Breast Care Center, and funded and launched Remeditex Ventures, a venture capital fund that invests in early biomedical research by universities and health care institutions designed to take promising scientific advances to the marketplace quickly.

In recent years, Miss Hill has focused her life sciences philanthropic efforts on a number of other game-changing advances. Chief among them are a $50 million grant to the University of Texas MD Anderson Cancer Center's Moon Shots Program which aims to combat and eliminate cancer; a $25 million grant to the University of Texas Southwestern (UTSW) Medical Center to establish the Lyda Hill Department of Bioinformatics; a $20 million grant to her alma mater, The Hockaday School, to fund a Science, Technology, Engineering, Arts and Mathematics (STEAM) program; a $3 million grant to the University of Colorado at Colorado Springs (UCCS), to establish a Veteran Health and Trauma Clinic and related academic program; a $2 million grant to the Center for BrainHealth, intended to help military service members and veterans recover from traumatic brain injuries; and grants to fund a variety of environmental and marine conservation efforts being conducted by The Nature Conservancy and Pew Charitable Trusts.

Also a patron of projects designed to revitalize communities near and dear to her, Miss Hill has been instrumental in the funding and development of, among other things, the Perot Museum of Nature and Science; the Margaret Hunt Hill Bridge in Dallas; a $6 million grant to VolunteerNow for their VOLY platform; and commitments to UCCS and the Garden of the Gods Visitor Center in Colorado Springs.

As part of her desire to leave a lasting mark on society, Miss Hill became a member of The Giving Pledge in 2010. The Pledge, created by Bill and Melinda Gates and Warren Buffett, is a commitment by some of the world's wealthiest individuals and families to dedicate a majority of their wealth to philanthropy. Miss Hill has pledged to donate the entirety of her wealth to charity, the bulk of which she plans to do during her lifetime.

In addition to her monetary gifts, countless nonprofit organizations have also benefited from Miss Hill's leadership, including the Visiting Nurses Association, the Dallas Chapter of the World Presidents' Organization, the Crystal Charity Ball, the Junior League of Dallas, the Dallas and Texas Chapters of the American Heart Association, and Easter Seals of North Texas. She is the recipient of numerous awards and honors including the prestigious President's Volunteer Action Award and an appointment to President Ronald Reagan's Advisory Council on Private Sector Initiatives for a project she launched in the 1980s called The Volunteer Connection. This enormously successful project, created to promote volunteerism in the Dallas/Fort Worth area, has since been duplicated nationwide.

Miss Hill attended The Hockaday School, a school for girls in Dallas, from 1952 to 1960. She entered Stanford University in 1960 but soon left to attend Hollins University, a small liberal arts college for women in Virginia, where she earned a bachelor's degree in mathematics in 1964.
